

- 1  Write a dialogue: One of you is Ben, the other is Ben's dad. Take turns writing. Don't talk. If you need help you can use ideas from More help at the bottom.

Ben, we have to talk.

Well, OK, Dad. What's the matter?

More help Cut out the sentences below and put them in the right order. Glue them into the speech bubbles. Read the dialogue with your partner. Then write your own dialogue.

... and secondly, you should spend more time on your school lessons.	A	Oh please, Dad, do I really have to? I already said sorry ...	G
That's not the point. You know that your school has a healthy eating policy, don't you?	B	Yes, I know. But our school policy doesn't mean that we have to eat rabbit food all the time.	H
Well, the principal will suspend you for a week if you sell junk food again! And now I have to go and talk to him – do you think I like that?	C	No, Dad. I'm sorry. I won't sell junk food at school again, I promise. But I'd like to make some money outside of school ...	I
I just got this letter from your principal. It says that you sold junk food at school. Is that true?	D	But lessons are often boring. I prefer to sell things – and I need the money too, because ...	J
Be careful, Ben, you're making me really angry! Firstly, junk food is unhealthy and it's against the school rules ...	E	OK, sorry Dad, but if I don't sell junk food, the other students will buy crisps and sugary drinks somewhere else.	K
No, Ben. You really should work harder at school. You need good results to get a good job later . And now I want you to come with me to pick up the food and say sorry to the principal!	F	Well, yeah, Dad, but what's wrong with selling food?	L